How to get project funding

Help with grant writing and proposals

The grants research and application process can be comprehensive and complex. Every grant has specific eligibility requirements, a different website and application process, and specific compliance mandates. For agencies without headcounts dedicated to this focus, this process becomes too much and they ultimately miss out on tapping into this lucrative funding stream.

Increase your success rate

Show me the money

Public sector agencies have access to hundreds of grants and funding sources to further their innovations and top initiatives, but far too often, the agencies that require financial assistance the most lack the resources and time to participate in this competitive landscape. Juniper can help.

Approximately 5,000 grant programs in the U.S. give $500B in funding annually.
An art and a science

Funded grants usually address a clearly identified need, either for a specific population or defined community. In addition, they should have measurable objectives and a compelling reason for using technology to achieve results.

Expert help is available

Through one-on-one meetings and tailored proposals, Juniper's contracted grant consultants can provide winning tips and must-have information, generate customized funder research reports, and offer consultation services throughout the process.

Target your efforts

With better proposals, your projects have a better chance of being funded, a better success rate, and provide a track record that can lead to future project success.

Find the grants, submit winning proposals

To level the grant competition, Juniper Networks has invested in making available no-cost, no-obligation grants consulting services through the Juniper Grants Assistance Program. Through this program, public sector agencies looking to identify and apply for tech-friendly grants can now lean on Juniper Networks.

Identify

Public sector agencies can request a customized grant funding report: A standalone resource that outlines and summarizes the top grant options for the agency's specified project.

Apply

Public sector agencies can lean on a grants consulting team to walk through the grant application process and answer questions along the way. Consultants are available to review and provide suggestions on drafted grant applications, ensuring compliance and increasing the chance of award.

Celebrate success

Juniper has engaged with Grants Office, a global grants development services firm, to provide consulting services. Their expertise improves your chances of funding, helps discover new funding sources, and can even expand existing initiatives.
